SPOTLIGHT

ECU Commission for Women's Chess

Meet Andrea Schmidbauer

Founder of Austrian Women's Bundesliga

1. Could you briefly introduce yourself and your role in supporting Women's Chess in Austria?

My name is Andrea Schmidbauer, I am playing chess since I have been 10 years old. In my youth and was quite successful. I still love chess, but more I love to organize chess events and run supporting chess projects. 21 years ago I was asked if I would like to take responsibility for women's issues within the chess federation. I've been doing so ever since.

2. You are the founder of the Austrian Women's Bundesliga. What inspired you to launch this initiative?

At that time, about 12 years ago, there wasn't any team competition for women in Austria. We had a huge dropout rate when girls switched over to adult sports. I attributed this to the lack of a women's team competition. I was able to initiate the Women's Bundesliga as an EU-funded project, so that no participating club had to take any costs.

3. How did the league develop from its early days to what it is today?

Initially, there was a lot of opposition. Many male chess players couldn't understand why money was being spent on women's chess, although it was for a specific purpose. I was also able to raise public funding for the second season, so the clubs had minimal costs. At that time, we played on two boards.

Caption text

Deserunt consequat labore eiusmod excepteur consectetur reprehenderit id quis laboris labore.

Then the league began to grow. First the number of boards was doubled to four, then the number of participating teams increased. For about five years there has also been a second Women's Bundesliga, also with four boards.

4. The Austrian Women's League is now considered one of the strongest in Europe. What makes the league so successful?

There are a few clubs in Austria which are willing to spend a lot of money. They do so for the Open Bundesliga and the Women's Bundesliga. I also think Austria is known for offering pleasant playing conditions.

5. Opinions in the chess world are quite divided when it comes gender-separated tournaments. What is your view on this topic?

I believe it's best to offer a wide range of options for players. From my own experience I know that women often enjoy participating in team events, especially women's events.

6. If other countries were to consider setting up a women's league themselves, what advice would you give? What were the main hurdles you had to overcome when founding the Austrian league?

If there are funding possibilities for the project they should definitely be taken. Austria's example shows that it makes sense to start small and grow continuously so that the clubs can take over responsibilities.

7. Looking ahead, do you have any hopes or plans for the future development of the Women's League or other initiatives supporting women in Austrian chess?

I am organizing the largest international chess open in Austria. Around 500 players of 50 different nations participate every year. The rate of participating women is overwhelming, it is more than 35%! I don't know what challenges lie ahead. But I'm ready. Enthusiasm and permanent engagement is needed to run the process permanently.

*"I don't know what challenges lie ahead. But I'm ready. Enthusiasm and permanent engagement is needed to run the process permanently",
Andrea Schmidbauer*

About 12th World Chess Champion - Anatoly Karpov

Anatoly Karpov (born May 23, 1951) is a Russian and former Soviet grandmaster and 12th World Chess Champion. He became the 12th World Chess Champion when Bobby Fischer declined to defend the title in 1975, and hold it from 1975 to 1985. He was a three-time FIDE World Champion (1993, 1996, 1998), twice World Chess champion as a member of the USSR team (1985, 1989), a six-time winner of Chess Olympiads as a member of the USSR team (1972, 1974, 1980, 1982, 1986, 1988), and the 1st World Rapid Chess Champion (1988). The International Association of Chess Press awarded him nine Chess Oscars (1973–77, 1979, 1980, 1981, 1984).

For 25 consecutive years (1974 — 1998), Karpov was either the world champion (16 years in total) or a world championship challenger, a record surpassed only by Emanuel Lasker. Karpov's chess tournament successes include over 160 first-place finishes. He had a peak Elo rating of 2780, and his 102 total months world number one is the third-longest of all time, behind Magnus Carlsen and Garry Kasparov. His epic rivalry with Garry Kasparov from 1984 to 1990 produced some of the most famous matches in chess, influencing generations of players.

Anatoly Karpov said about chess:

- Chess is everything — art, science, and sport.
- If you want to be a champion, you must be willing to take risks.
- I like to make my opponent feel that he is in control, and then I take over the game.
- The most important skill in chess is not attacking, but being able to defend well.
- No other sport requires as much preparation as chess.
